State of Nebraska at this time. The same questions that came up in the other bill, the description of the land, the acres that will have to be measured, whether or not they can even be exempt down to the acres and the meters the description of the land will have to be decided. All this will have to be done by...at the expense of the taxpayers, and if these dams go dry, perhaps a farmer might want to farm part of this land and if this was exempt from taxes, he wouldn't be able to farm this land. The idea of a dam anywhere on a farm or anything like that is to prevent or to stop the washout of the soil from his land. Eventually, these dams will fill up. They will gradually fill up over the years. Then if you have a little dry spell, this land is dry and the farmer wants to farm it. Now a lot has been said here about conserving the water, out in our country we have these lakes all over and the last few years these small lakes, shallow lakes, have been going dry one after another. The large lakes are going down and down. If this continues on, if this drouth we have now continues on, these large lakes, some of them will go dry. In the '30's during that drouth, I saw nearly all of these big lakes absolutely dry and that was long before we ever thought of an irrigation pump or anything of the sort. They went dry because there was no rain. We had a dry spell and we are having a dry spell now. All we need to have these dams full and the water in the lakes and everything full is a good rainy spell for about two or three years and eventually we will have that. But right now, we are dry. Some of these dams in this country are dry. You can't legislate Mother Nature. With 25 votes, this body can do most anything but you can't make it rain. The only way I know that you might make it rain is to get some of my friends down here from the Sioux Reservation and let them have a little Rain Dance out here. I think that might help a little bit. The owners are losing the rights of his land, well, no, he is not losing the right of owning that land but he is losing the right to use that land because if it is exempt from taxes it is going to have to be surveyed, perhaps maybe even fenced so the livestock can't get in there and he is going to lose the right to use that land. I think this bill is a bad bill and it should be killed at this time and laid to rest quietly as possible. Thank you.

PRESIDENT: I can advise you that Senator Bereuter's light is on but I would like to ask, do you want to be heard on the motion to kill, Senator Rasmussen?

SENATOR RASMUSSEN: Mr. President, members, I had a question of Senator Bereuter or two.

SENATOR BEREUTER: Yes, Senator Rasmussen.

SENATOR RASMUSSEN: Who is going to do the policing on this, Doug? Somebody is going to have to see that the law is followed, aren't they?
